not constitute a great while in the lifetime of a generation, but it does constitute a great while in the life of the individual through which the process and the public must pass while this document is awaiting its "release" might have been averted. This is the second annual report which has been received from the public. The first was that of the Western State Department, which was once made public through the press. It is not known what course the other State departments will pursue with reference to making public their annual reports, as the recent ruling of the State Department has been of assistance to him brings up an entirely new question. They may follow the old custom and hand them out at once, or if they see fit, they may fix some date in the future upon which they will be "cleared" for simultaneous publication.

As no one on the outside has seen inside of the Labor Commissioner's report, it is impossible to enumerate the subjects with which it deals, but the commissioner was reassuring in saying that there was nothing that would be found between the hide of a horse being kept in a bakery in any city in the State. The public will no doubt await the "release" of the report with consuming interest. Meanwhile the newspapers are on notice concerning the report, and are preparing to give the report every inch of available space—perhaps. There is no indication that afternoon papers will issue extra editions; for all the public may know, the presses may be closed for the day, and the printers ready to cast the papers to the four quarters of the Commonwealth, but they are warned now not to shout that horses sleep in the rooms where bread is made and baked.

At noon to-morrow the 300 pages will be flung upon the fragrant, peaceful air.

CAPTURE MONKEY IN SEMINARY LOT

Little Jungle Creature Got Lost, and Is Captured by Theological Student After Chase.

Far from his native jungle, a little, hopeless-looking and very tired monkey was chased around the lot at the Union Theological Seminary yesterday morning and finally hemmed in by Mr. J. E. Hemphill, one of the students at the institution.

As soon as the monkey entered the grounds where Christian education is taught, he gazed about him rather bewildered that there was no organ to greet him, or that there were no others of his kind swinging and chattering from the trees. He sighed discontentedly for his former haunts, where a tree nest was his only home, and the only place that he wanted to call home. Feeling miserable at the lack of company, he approached nearer, hoping, probably that some child would come out with a stick of candy or some other delicacy appreciated by monkeys and children alike. But he saw only a few grave-faced students with books under their arms, marching to and from the lecture room, and he heard only the soft noises of nature. Plainly he was in the wrong place.

There were no signs of friendliness there. He turned to go, and as he did some of the students of theology espied him making off through the grass. Books were dropped, and the little monkey thought he had never before heard such a hullabaloo. He turned to run, but they chased him in and out, and Mr. Hemphill finally cornered him. He was a tame little fellow, and around his body was fastened a belt, showing that he had been in training. He was tame enough, and offered no resistance when the theologian's hands closed around him. He uttered something in his guttural tongue, and touched his mouth suggestively with his left foot. The boys understood, and food was produced.

Mr. Rempnall will keep the monkey until Tuesday. If he is not claimed by that time he will take him to his home in Atlanta, and there present him as an animal captured in the wilds surrounding the seminary.

Thousands Converted.
Dr. Chapman has for five years conducted simultaneous campaigns in over fifty American cities, and has seen tens of thousands unite with the churches as an outcome. In Pittsburgh 7,000 converts were recorded, while in Minneapolis 3,000 joined the churches within three months after the visit of the evangelist and his corps of workers.

Before becoming an evangelist Dr. Chapman was a pastor in New York City and Philadelphia. In the latter city when thirty-two years old, he took charge of Bethany Church, which John Wanamaker is an elder of, which has the largest Sunday school in America. In less than three years there were 1,100 additions to the church, on confession of faith, of whom more than half were men. Later he was pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church, New York City, which became under his leadership, one of the strongest congregations in the metropolis.

Dr. Chhman was born in Richmond Ind., in 1859. He was left an orphan at nineteen, and had to struggle for an education. He graduated from Lake Forest University in 1879, and from Lane Theological Seminary three years later. He is the author of a number of books on "The Christian Life," and is the president and director of the World's Bible Conference, every summer assembly, where thousands of people gather annually, including about 2,500 ministers, evangelists and missionaries to listen to the foremost Christian leaders of America and England.

Mr. Alexander's Career. Charles M. Alexander has probably had as romantic a career as any evangelist in history. From an obscure evangelist he made a five years' tour around the world with Dr. R. A. Torrey, and became the most famous gospel singer living. His revival melodies took London by storm. In a short time the city was singing and whistling his "Glory Song" and other of his tunes.

While engaged in mission work in England Mr. Alexander was married to Miss Helen Cadbury, a daughter of Richard Cadbury, of Birmingham. Two years later he left Dr. Torrey and made a second tour of the world for the restoration of his wife's health. In the course of the journey some remarkable meetings were held, one in the theatre at Hong Kong, and several in various Australian cities.

At Melbourne 12,000 people thronged the great Exhibition Hall to welcome him. It was the largest crowd ever assembled for a religious service in the structure. A week later, in Sydney 4,500 people crowded into the town hall, while, according to the police, 5,000 more surrounded the place.

During the past two years Mr. Alex-popular of the new gospel songs, which will be heard in the campaigns here are "He Will Hold Me Fast," "Who Could It Be But Jesus?" "No Burden Yonder" and "Don't Stop Praying." The first two of all these songs was composed by Robert Harkness, the Australian pianist, who accompanies Mr. Alexander in his work.

Mr. Alexander is accompanied by his wife, who is originator of the Rocket Testimony, and a gospel singer, who is also assisted in the musical part of the services by Mr. E. W. Nattiger, of Indiana, a soloist.
